MISS MARIE VON PHUL,

season that the afternoon wedding is the thing.

All marriage ceremonies, to be amart and up-to-date, must be performed at some hour between moon and 8 o'clock.

Eyening weddings are quite passe. Nor is the erstwhile "high noon" or morning affair thought to be fashionable this season. None but the afternoon church or house ceremony is considered by Yanity Fair. New York is living up to this new rule very religiously. There has not take rule wedding of any prominence in the Eastern metropolis this autumn-and the crop has been amazingly large-that has not taken place at alout 2.20 or 4 c clock.

Neither Chicago, nor St. Louis, nor the West in general his followed the lead. Western weddings are still evening affairs, in the main, with a few scattering ones before and at midday. All the large St. Louis

There are some extenusting circumstances which make afternoon weddings in the West inconvenient and oftimes impossible. The moonvenient and oftimes impossible. The absence of a distinct leisure class, such as New York and the East possesses, is one of these. The men who officiate most frequently at large weddings in the East are men whose business duties—if they have any at all—easily permit of their indulging the say around of afference discrete.
